FORTIETH REPORT

OF THE

INSPECTOR

OF

REFORMATORY AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS IN IRELAND.

TO THE

RIGHT HON. GEORGE WYNDHAM, P.C., M.P.,

&c., &c.,

CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE LORD LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND.

Office of Inspector of Reformatory
and Industrial Schools,

Dublin Castle,

8th October, 1902.

SIR,

I have the honour to submit to you the Annual Report on the Reformatory and Industrial Schools in Ireland, for the year ending the 31st December, 1901.

The number of Schools under inspection last year was—6 Reformatories and 70 Industrial Schools.

In the course of the year each school was inspected once after a formal notice was given to the Managers, and surprise visits were made to most of them as well.

The most important event of the year as regards Reformatory and Industrial Schools was the passing of the Youthful Offenders Act, which came into operation on the 1st of January, 1902.

The provisions of this Act as far as they refer to the children committed to these schools may be briefly indicated as follows :—

Section 1.—Conviction of felony under section 13 of Industrial Schools Act.

This section provides that where a child or young person having been convicted of felony is discharged or is punished with whipping only, the conviction shall not count as a conviction for the purpose of section 13 of the Industrial Schools Act.

Section 2.—Parent responsible for offence of child.

Under this section the parent may be held liable for offence of child if there is reason to believe that he has conduced to the commission of the offence, &c.

Section 4 (1).—Remand or committal to place other than prison.

This sub-section gives power to Court (when remanding or committing for trial) to place a child in the custody of a fit person instead of sending him to prison. If a child escapes from such custody he may be apprehended without warrant and brought back.

Section 5. — Extension of power to commit to Industrial Schools.

A Court of Assize or Quarter Sessions may also commit to Industrial Schools.

Section 6 (1).—Parental contribution.

This section allows a Court of Summary Jurisdiction when committing to a Reformatory or Industrial School to make at the same time such an order on the parent for a contribution as may be made under the Reformatory or Industrial Schools Act (for means of enforcement see section 17 (5)).

Section 6 (4).

Parent must give notice of change of address to Inspector or to his agent. If he fails to do so he shall be liable to a fine of £2.

Section 15 (1).—Repeal of part of section 12 of Reformatory Schools Act, 1868.

This section makes provisions the effect of which is that a child under 12 years of age and not previously convicted cannot be sent to a Reformatory.

Section 15 (2).—Supervision of children up to the age of 18.

This sub-section extends the Industrial Schools Acts Amendment Act, 1894, to Ireland.

This Act provides (sec. 1 (1)) that every child sent to an Industrial School after the passing of the Act shall, from the expiration of the period of his detention in such school, remain up to the age of 18 under the supervision of the managers of the school.

A child under supervision may be placed out on licence and may be recalled at any time if the manager is of opinion that the recall is necessary for the protection of the child, but the child must again be licensed as soon as possible and at latest within three months after the recall.

Section 2 provides the penalty for inducing a child placed on licence to escape or for preventing the child from returning to the person to whom he is licensed. The penalty for such an offence is a fine not exceeding £20, or, at the discretion of the justices, imprisonment for any term not exceeding two months, with or without hard labour.

Section 3 makes provision for children under Order of Detention at the passing of the Act to come under the provisions of the Act by consenting voluntarily, whereupon the Chief Secretary make order that the provisions of the Act shall apply.

Section 8.—Contributions by County Councils.

A County Council which has contributed towards the support of a child in a Reformatory or Industrial School may contribute to ultimate disposal of child.

Section 17 (5).—Enforcement of Parental responsibility.

An order for maintenance under this Act may be enforced in the manner provided by Section 25 of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1868 (i.e. by Distress Warrant and imprisonment in default).

REFORMATORIES.

Of the six Reformatory Schools in Ireland—

2 are for Roman Catholic Boys.
3 " " Girls.
1 for Protestant Boys.

The two Roman Catholic Schools for boys contained a total of 427 inmates at the end of the year, Philipstown having 255, and Glencree 172.

The three Roman Catholic Reformatories for girls contained a total of only 61 inmates at the end of the year—23 in High Park, 19 in Limerick, and 19 in Spark's Lake, Monaghan.

The school at High Park was built to accommodate over 100 inmates. It is a magnificent building, complete in every particular, and specially adapted for the purposes of a Reformatory. The same may be said of Limerick. Having regard to the small number of girls in Reformatories, I think their interests would be best provided for by having only one school. In order to comply with the present requirements of the educational movement in the way of literary and industrial training, these matters could be more effectually accomplished in one school having a large number of inmates than in separate schools with but very few.

The following Table, giving the number of children under detention on 31st December, 1900, and on the 31st December, 1901, shows a decrease of 28 for 1901 as compared with 1900:—

—	On 31st December, 1900.			On 31st December, 1901.
	Males.	Fe- males.	Total.	Males.	Fe- males.	Total.
In School,	530	65	595	512	61	573
On Licence,	26	-	26	23	-	23
In Prison,	-	-	-	-	-	-
Absconded—sentence unexpired,	3	-	3	1	-	1
In School—sentence expired, .	-	-	-	-	-	-
Total,	559	65	624	535	61	596

The number committed to Reformatories last year was 133, showing a decrease of 52 as compared with committals in 1900

The following Table gives the number of boys and girls committed for each of the last five years:—

YEAR.	BOYS.	GIRLS.	TOTAL.
1897. . . .	157	15	172
1898. . . .	120	16	136
1899. . . .	103	20	123
1900. . . .	171	14	185
1901. . . .	121	12	133

Of 133 committed 125 were sent direct to Reformatories, and 8 under 12 years of age were subjected to a preliminary term of imprisonment before they were sent to Reformatories. Since the passing of the Youthful Offenders Act the senseless provision, under which no child under 12 not previously convicted could be sent to a Reformatory without being first sentenced to a term of imprisonment, is no longer in force. No child can for the future be sent to prison preliminary to being sent to a Reformatory, and no child under 12 not previously convicted can be sent to a Reformatory.

The following Table gives the number of juveniles committed in 1901 to Reformatories and the offence for which they were convicted:—

Offences.	No. Committed.	Offences.	No. Committed.
Larceny and Petty Theft. .	95	Fraudulent Offences. . .	1
" Fixtures. . . .	1	Burglary.	2
" by Servants. . . .	1	Wilful Damage, &c., . . .	2
" from the Person. . .	2	Assaults.	7
" in Dwelling-house. .	5	Vagrancy.	3
Attempt to Steal.	5	Other Offences.	6
Unlawful Possession of Goods.	2
Receiving Stolen Goods. . .	1	Total.	133

STATE OF INSTRUCTION ON ADMISSION.

Of 121 boys committed 42 could neither read nor write, 72 could read, or read and write imperfectly, and 7 could read and write well. Of the 12 girls committed 1 could neither read nor write, 11 could read, or read and write imperfectly.

While the relation of crime to illiteracy is well shown by the foregoing figures, the slight decline in the numbers committed as compared with last year's return may be taken as a hopeful sign that as the influence of the present educational move extends, the number of youthful offenders will become less.

HEALTH OF INMATES.

The health of the inmates in Reformatories has been good during the past year; 5 deaths were recorded for the year ended the 31st December, 1901.

EDUCATION.

Owing to the unfavourable conditions under which young people live, who become subjects for Reformatory Schools, they are very backward, or totally deficient in literary acquirements, and have contracted habits that produce a distaste for any kind of literary or industrial training. - Notwithstanding the difficulties that Managers of Reformatories have to contend with in this respect, the results obtained are most gratifying. I have asked managers to adopt as nearly as possible the methods and principles embodied in the new programme for National Schools.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING.

The methods still adopted under this heading are to a great extent carried out on antiquated lines. There is, I am glad to say, a move made in several respects to fall in with the new and intelligent methods now employed in the training of the youth of the country in industrial pursuits. Hand and eye and manual instruction is being introduced, and a step has been made in the direction of training in a more intelligent manner those boys engaged in agriculture and horticulture.

DISCHARGES.

The number of boys discharged during the year was 145, of whom 17 enlisted, 46 were sent to employment, 59 returned to friends, 4 emigrated, 1 was sent to sea, 1 was discharged on account of disease, 4 died, 2 absconded, and 11 were discharged, being illegally committed. Sixteen girls were discharged, and of these 8 were sent to employment, 6 returned to friends, 1 died, and 1 was discharged, being illegally committed.

It is gratifying to find that the number of those who returned to friends were fewer than last year, and that the number of boys who enlisted was 17 as compared with 11 last year, while there were 10 more sent to employment than last year.

The following Table shows the amount received from the Treasury, local rates, other sources, and by industrial profits during the past two years:—

From the above Table it will appear that the supply of children for Reformatories is found mainly in the large cities.

The number of children committed to Reformatories from Dublin City in 1900 was 96—in 1901, 34. This marked decrease in committals of youthful offenders is very gratifying, and is due, I believe, to the healthier tone that pervades the whole procedure in the committal of children to Industrial Schools.

Heretofore the parties, who interested themselves in bringing cases before magistrates with a view to committal, taboed the vicious child—the child in immoral, dangerous surroundings—since the majority of the Managers would not receive such cases, or cases coming under the 13th section into their schools, with the result that these cases ripened afterwards into fit subjects for Reformatories.

I am pleased to say that this state of things is much improved, and that the class of children, for whom the Industrial Schools Act was intended, is now being sent to Industrial Schools, and Managers, with few exceptions, do not object to receive such children when committed.

INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS

There were 70 Industrial Schools under inspection in Ireland during the year 1901.

The following Table gives the number of children under detention in these schools on the 31st December, 1900 and 1901 :—

	On 31st December, 1900.			On 31st December, 1901.
	Males.	Females.	Total.	Males.	Females.	Total.
In School (within number paid for under the Rules).	3,846	4,062	7,908	3,437	3,938	7,375

Total.	3,672	4,549	8,221	3,769	4,485	8,254

The following Table shows the number of Roman Catholics and Protestants under detention on 31st December, 1901 :—

	BOYS.			GIRLS.
	Roman Catholics.	Protestants.	Total.	Roman Catholics.	Protestants.	Total.
In School (within number paid for under the Rules).	2,941	496	3,437	3,649	329	3,978
In School (in excess of the number paid for, or under 6 years of age).	95	15	110	159	33	192

Absconded—sentence unexpired.	5	5	10	1	1	2
Remaining in School—sentence expired.	6	2	8	109	1	110
Total.	3,232	537	3,769	4,088	397	4,485

During the year some important changes have taken place. The Manager of Carysfort School for R. C. girls, at Blackrock, resigned her certificate. The school, which was certified for 80 girls, was closed in December. The children under detention were transferred in September, 40 to Golden Bridge Industrial School and 26 to Booterstown Industrial School. The certificate for Booterstown School was at the same time increased by 26.

The Committee of Heytesbury Street School for Protestant girls resigned their certificate, and the Meath School, Bray, for Protestant girls, got at the same time an increase to its certificate in order to provide for the 20 children transferred to it from Heytesbury Street. The increased number of certificates granted to the Booterstown and Meath (Bray) Schools falls short of the number resigned by the two schools which were closed.

Out of the 70 Industrial Schools, only six submitted accounts that had been regularly audited by a chartered accountant or auditor. These Schools are Baltimore for Roman Catholic boys, Balmoral, and Meath, Blackrock, for Protestant boys, Hampton House, Shamrock Lodge, and Meath, Bray, for Protestant girls.

It is a practice in many of the schools where improvements are urgently needed to effect one in a highly elaborate and expensive way, and to shelve the others for want of money. This is not as it should be. At less expense equally efficient means might be employed to effect the object in view, and cement and concrete could be made to serve where enamelled tiles and marble were used. Expensive and decorative constructions are very liable to get out of order, and then fall into disuse, owing to the further expense of repairing them. In one school I found a marble plunge-bath that served as a receptacle for various articles, and could hold almost anything except water. In this same school many of the simple cheap essentials for promoting cleanliness were absent.

The Parliamentary Grant to Industrial Schools amounted last year to £96,787 12s. 3d. County and Borough Councils contributed £38,498 5s. 4d., the rate varying from 1s. to 2s. 6d. per week for each child. Some of these bodies stipulate with special schools for a certain number of children, for whom they pay their highest rate; to other schools, which they recognise, they give a lesser rate; and to the remaining schools they refuse to contribute anything for children committed to them from their Counties or Boroughs.

To differentiate in this way appears to me to be both unreasonable and unjust, inasmuch as a child is supposed to receive the same advantages from training and to involve the same amount of expense to Managers in whatever school he or she may be detained. The Treasury makes a uniform grant for every child in a certified Industrial School; and it seems to me that the same principle of a uniform rate might well be adopted by the County and Borough Councils for every child for whom they contribute, irrespective of the school of which he or she may be an inmate.

Except in very rare cases, Managers of schools refuse to accept a child unless the local authority agrees to contribute towards the child's support, and thus it frequently happens that when the local body refuses to contribute and Managers refuse to admit a child without a contribution, Magistrates have only a choice of evils—to send the child to gaol, to a Reformatory, or back to its bad home and companions.

The Dublin Corporation has made arrangements with certain schools, notably Artane, to contribute at the rate of 2s. per head per week for a limited number of boys committed from the city, and it is no unusual thing to find the number of boys very much under that stipulated for, the balance of places being filled by boys from other parts of the country. Recently in Artane there were only 470 boys from Dublin for 537 Corporation places.

There is a Standing Order of the Council in existence, which seriously interferes with the aim of the Industrial Schools Act. Under this Order a certificate for a contribution to an Industrial School is only to be issued in those cases where the Committee is satisfied on a report from its Inspector that the child has no relative to maintain it.

Cases have repeatedly occurred where children charged with petty offences, whom the magistrates were most anxious to send to Industrial Schools, were either committed to Reformatories or sent back to their vicious surroundings owing to the fact that the Corporation refused to grant Industrial School certificates, because the earnings of the parents were sufficient to support their families. Hence it happens that if such children are sent to Reformatories the charge is 3s. 6d. per head, instead of 2s., and the cost to the ratepayers is 1s. 6d. per head per week more than if they were sent to Industrial Schools, whilst the children themselves are stamped with the brand of criminality for life.

In striking contrast with this is the practice followed in Belfast, where the Magistrates' order of committal is sufficient to obtain the Corporation grant of 2s. 6d. per week for every child to whatever school he or she may be committed throughout Ireland.

Until very recently there was some sort of excuse for the practice followed by the Dublin Corporation in reference to committals. Owing to the unrestricted flow of children into Industrial Schools, a great number of whom did not come within the scope of the Act, the contributions to these schools were at one time as high as £11,000 or £12,000 a year, although the area of charge was limited by the city boundaries before their extension.

At the present time an altered state of things prevails. Owing to the better administration of the Industrial Schools Act, the number of committals from Dublin has fallen very much, and the cases are more in accordance with the spirit of the Act. The contribution from the Dublin Corporation last year amounted only to £6,848. This represents a saving at the rate of about £5,000 a year effected in a few years. I may mention that the provisions of the Youthful Offenders Act are now in force, and that under this Act parents, if able, can be compelled, under a penalty of imprisonment, to contribute towards the support of their children while in Industrial Schools.

These considerations would lead me to hope that the Corporation may see its way to remove the objectionable Standing Order that blocks the way against the reformation of many neglected children, and thus strengthen the reputation of the city for its proverbial charity and generosity.

That local authorities should, in any way, from a spirit of false economy place obstacles in the way of committals of children, actually or potentially criminal, is a very short-sighted policy. Such children if not looked after at an early stage of their career are almost sure to grow up in criminal ways, and prove a source of danger to the community, and of great expense to the tax payer.

The whole question is one that might, I think, be usefully considered by the representatives of County Councils at their annual meetings, with a view to making the grant to Industrial Schools uniform and payable for every child committed from their counties no matter where the school is situated to which such committal is made.

ADMISSIONS.

During the year 1901, 694 boys and 662 girls were admitted to Industrial Schools in Ireland.

The following Table gives the number of admissions for each of the last ten years. During the past 20 years 2,000 more girls than boys were committed to Industrial Schools in Ireland.

YEAR.	BOYS.	GIRLS.
1892,	631	762
1893,	620	690
1894,	604	673
1895,	692	728
1896,	693	686
1897,	632	778
1898,	665	833
1899,	477	473
1900,	519	503
1901,	694	662

From this Table it will be seen that for the past three years the number of committals of girls as compared with those of boys is approaching normal proportions. In 1897 there were 146 more girls committed than boys. In 1901 there were 32 more boys than girls committed.

The greater relative proportion of boys to girls in the cases of admission to Reformatories, where the committals are a true index of criminality, is strikingly conclusive that the criminal tendencies of boys are much greater than those of girls.

The following Table of the committals to Reformatories for the past ten years is a sufficiently convincing proof of the above statement :—

YEAR.	BOYS.	GIRLS.
1892.	131	11
1893.	110	23
1894.	120	14
1895.	112	10
1896.	110	9
1897.	157	15
1898.	190	16
1899.	102	20
1900.	171	14
1901.	121	12

The conclusions at which I have arrived in reference to the above statement of facts are—that commitments to Industrial Schools are at present made with more care and discrimination than previously obtained, and that the class of children who come within the scope of the Act, for whom these schools were intended, and who are most in need of supervision, is very perceptibly increasing in the schools.

That the decrease in the number of committals of girls to Industrial Schools may lead to an increase in the committals to Reformatories is a state of things I do not anticipate. If we look at the returns of Great Britain on this head, we find that although the proportion of girls to boys in Industrial Schools is very small, the proportion in the case of Reformatories is even less.

The following Table gives the number of boys and girls committed to Industrial Schools in England and Wales for each of the five years 1896-1900 :—

YEAR.	BOYS.	GIRLS.
1896.	3,427	990
1897.	3,415	1,002
1898.	3,463	946
1899.	3,240	918
1900.	3,169	812

The following Table gives the number of boys and girls committed to Reformatories in Great Britain for each of the five years, 1896-1900:—

YEAR.	BOYS.	GIRLS.
1896,	1,080	197
1897,	1,236	185
1898,	1,363	170
1899,	1,138	177
1900,	1,356	177

I have already drawn attention to the fact that one school for Roman Catholic girls was closed during the year, and that the management of one school for Protestant girls resigned their certificate. I have also to state that some managers of girls' schools are complaining that owing to the great falling off in their numbers they may have to close their schools.

In contrast with this, the boys' schools, with one exception (Marble Hill School, Cork, for Protestant boys), are full, and in some cases have children in excess of the number certified for.

Having regard to the circumstances heretofore influencing committals, and the altered state of things in this regard at the present time, this result is not to be wondered at. While I see no prospect of an increase in the committal of girls to Industrial Schools, but rather a further decrease, I believe that in the case of boys the numbers will go on increasing, and that it may be found necessary to provide further accommodation for them in the schools.

There is still, I believe, a great number of children at large who properly come within the scope of the Act, and it would be to their advantage, as well as to that of the community, if they were placed in Industrial Schools. This can only be done by more practical and widespread action on the part of those who take an interest in the neglected children of the country.

PARENTAL CONTRIBUTIONS.

During the year 1901, as will be seen by the following Table, contributions from parents for children in Reformatory Schools amounted to £404 0s. 10d., and for children in Industrial Schools to £759 7s. 5d., making a total of £1,165 8s. 3d. This is an increase of £177 18s. 3d. on the amount collected in 1900.

The clause in the Youthful Offenders Act for the better enforcement of parental responsibility confers on magistrates the power to make an order for a parental contribution on a parent or other responsible person at the time of committal, and the same can be enforced under a penalty of imprisonment. Since such large powers can be availed of, it is to be hoped that parents able to contribute towards the maintenance of their children will be compelled to do so, and be made to feel that while getting rid of their children they will not be able to shirk all parental responsibility.

The extension to Ireland of the Industrial Schools Act Amendment Act of 1894 for England, by which powers are conferred on Managers to supervise children after they have left their schools and till they are eighteen years of age, has supplied a want much felt in this country.

The benefits to a certain class of children by the judicious and firm enforcement of the provisions of this Act will be productive of much good. The knowledge that such power can be exercised will have a healthy deterrent influence on children disposed to be careless or vicious after they leave school, as well as on all other persons who might aid or abet them in thwarting the action of Managers in this regard.

It is gratifying to find that during the year fewer children returned to friends, and fewer emigrated, than during the previous year.

In several cases Managers have availed themselves of the assistance of the Philanthropic Association. The members of this Association are willing, if requested, to make inquiries into and report on the character of the home surroundings of children about to be discharged. They are also ready to furnish information about children already discharged, in whose progress Managers are interested. The good effects of this action on the part of the Association will be very far reaching, in conjunction with the new power conferred on Managers to supervise children till they are eighteen years of age.

HEALTH.

During the year there were 80 deaths in Industrial Schools. Allowing for the class of children from which the schools are recruited I still consider the rate too high, and hope to see it lowered as the result of a better and more judicious treatment. There have been epidemics of scarlatina in a few of the schools, which were promptly suppressed by isolating the affected children.

I am pleased to report that ophthalmia is disappearing from most of the schools. This result has been brought about by the strict attention given by Managers to all forms of eye affections, and by persistently carrying out the instructions as to prevention and curative means.

In the well-managed schools I rarely find a case in the infirmaries, which are kept up only with a view to meeting possible contingencies.

In some schools under careless or incompetent management I generally find the infirmaries numerously tenanted. In one of these I lately found 30 inmates, the majority of whom suffered from a contagious affection of the scalp. This did not astonish me, when I subsequently found that it was the custom in this school for as many as four or six boys, when they got a bath, to bathe in the same water.

In a few of the schools the services of a dentist have been employed with much advantage to the children.

During six or seven months of the year I find the presence of chilblains frequently and painfully manifest in most of the schools. In some of the well-managed ones, where Managers have given careful and intelligent attention to preventive measures, it is a rare thing to find a case of chilblains. In other schools I find one-half or two-thirds of the school suffering from chilblains in varying degrees of violence. There is no reason why this scourge of the schools should not be banished, or at least modified, to a very great degree. No doubt institution life tends very much to the development of chilblains; but if the conditions that give rise to them are understood, and proper measures are taken to suppress them, their manifestations should be rare. If proper attention were given to my recommendations in my circular to Managers as to housing, food, clothes, and exercise, there would be fewer and less aggravated cases than are found at present.

But when I find schools—some with children of tender years—managed and disciplined on cast-iron lines, where the children have to rise at six o'clock on a winter's morning, march partially clad into a cold lavatory, wash in cold water, and try to dry their faces and hands with a damp towel, and then spend the time till breakfast at eight o'clock in a cold, and perhaps ill-ventilated room, at work or study, it does not surprise me to find chilblains and other forms of disease among them. When added to this, the children get dry bread and shell cocoa for breakfast and supper every day, and the same for dinner, supplemented with a plate of cabbage on two or three days in the week, I cannot see where the carbonaceous or heat-producing properties are to come from, and how the little heat that is generated, can be economised by a calico shirt and a light suit of clothes more fit for summer than winter wear.

This condition of things I have observed recently, and have remonstrated with Managers about it. In many of the schools attention has been paid to carrying out the suggestions in my circular on these points, but in others only a grudging effort has been made in that direction, more especially so in some of the boys' schools.

LITERARY TRAINING.

With a very few exceptions, all the schools have now adopted the New Programme for National Schools. The standard subjects, especially Writing, continue to be well taught in the large majority of them. Reading is improving, but in some schools it is still taught in a very mechanical manner. The results of the examinations in Arithmetic are not so satisfactory as they used to be, and this state of affairs will probably continue for a year or two more until all, or nearly all, the children who were in the schools before the adoption of the New Programme shall have left. Spelling is always a difficulty, and it is surprising to find children who can spell orally quite satisfactorily breaking down completely when asked to write down six selected words. However, teachers must strive to correct this, as the children when they leave school seldom want to know how to spell a word except for the purpose of writing it. Much less school time is now given to Geography than formerly. The "Geographical Readers" are being more generally used, and in the hands of good teachers are made the basis of useful lessons in the subject; but throughout the schools generally the children are now having very little Geography. Grammar and analysis are going on satisfactorily, and Composition is much more generally practised, and many of the senior children are able to write a very creditable letter before they leave the schools.

Considerable progress has been made during the year under review with Kindergarten exercises. They had been taught for some years in nearly all the girls' Industrial Schools. They are now taught in almost all the boys' schools also, and with excellent results. In several the more advanced exercises in Hand-and-Eye training are very well done, and they serve as a connecting-link between the schoolroom and the workshops. In this connection I should like to lay emphasis on the importance of Drawing, as it can be turned to practical use in all the trades shops.

Manual instruction is given in an increasing number of schools. In some cases it is very well done, but there are Managers who do not take the right view of the object of this exercise, and only consider it useful when taught as a preliminary to the carpenters' shop. The true object is educational, and it may be taught with perhaps more benefit to a tailor or farm-boy than to a carpenter.

In several of the Girls Schools Technical Schools have been started, in which the girls living in the district, as well as those in the school, participate. All the schools that are near towns might do more in this direction.

The difficulty about teachers trained under the National Board, still, to a large extent, continues, the time they serve in our schools not counting towards the securing of a pension.

The limited recognition of our schools granted last year by the Commissioners of National Education has been made considerable use of. Several schools having got teachers fresh from Training Colleges, and the new blood, and up-to-date methods, introduced have had good results, but so long as the present conditions last we cannot expect teachers trained under the National Board to remain more than a year or two with us while they are looking out for positions in National Schools.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING.

A great advance has been made in those schools where Hand-and-Eye training and Manual Instruction are carried out in conjunction with or previous to technical training. As a result the boys in these schools show a great superiority over those in schools where the old-fashioned methods are still in vogue.

Some Managers do not or I should rather say, will not, see the great advantages in training their boys on these lines, and in their schools the lack of intelligence on the part of the boys is strikingly apparent

In previous reports I have drawn attention to the great injustice done to boys engaged in gardening and agriculture in not giving them instruction of a kind that will induce them to take an intelligent interest in their work. Improvement in this direction has been very slow, but I am pleased to report that in some schools efforts are at present being made to comply with those requirements, which are so essential for lads about to be engaged in agricultural pursuits.

CLASSIFICATION OF SCHOOLS.

In the course of my inspection, since I was appointed to my present office, I was always forcibly impressed with the great differences I observed between schools in their general character and methods of administration, and while in my annual reports I had occasion to censure certain general abuses and shortcomings, I hesitated to single out any particular school for condemnation. At the same time, I felt that justice was not done to those good schools which deserved recognition as such.

I now propose to divide the schools into three classes, in their order of merit. In conjunction with my colleague, the Assistant Inspector, and after impartially considering the merits of every school, I have given each the place I think it deserves. In doing this, the principal consideration that influenced me was the possession of the qualities that I considered constituted a well-managed school, and at the same time showed the best results in the general training of the children. In some I found special subjects exceptionally well taught, but at the expense of the general education and training of the child. The development of such lopsided acquirements I consider less useful as a foundation for a sound education than a harmonious all-round elementary training in the subjects usually taught to children.

In February, 1901, I issued a Circular to Managers, in which I tabulated my views on the principles and practice which I considered might be followed with advantage in the administration of the schools, and gave them to understand that in accordance with the standard I laid down would I judge the efficiency and general character of each. I am pleased to say that the response to that circular by a large number of the schools has been most satisfactory. This applies more to the girls' than to the boys' schools.

Girls' schools.

In a few of the girls' schools the training of children has been brought to a very high standard, indeed. In many more a great effort is being made in the same direction, while in those that have made but little progress I find the absence of improvement due either to incapacity or indifference on the part of Managers and Assistants.

While there are but three schools which I consider entitled to be placed in the first class, there are others that in many respects are quite as good, but show at the same time marked deficiency in some features that appear to me to be essential in the general training of children.

I may mention briefly some of the qualities that distinguish these three first class schools.

In every department from class-hall, dormitories, down to scullery and coal-hole, there is an air of order and cleanliness. The children always appear neat in dress and person, healthy, bright, and cheerful, and respectful in their manners. Great attention is given to personal cleanliness; the girls in one of the schools have their daily bath, while in the others they have a bath twice a week. In the lavatory each has her nail and tooth brush. In menial work, such as scrubbing floors, cleaning grates, boots, steels, attending to cows, pigs and fowl, while they are instructed in and carry out this kind of work in an orderly and effective manner, it is impressed on them that no form of work need be of a degrading nature, but is elevating in proportion to the spirit in which it is undertaken, and the method in which it is carried out.

NEEDLEWORK AND DRESSMAKING.—Girls from 14 to 16 years of age in these schools are able to cut out unaided and make every garment they wear. They can use the sewing machine, knit, darn, and patch in the neatest manner.

Cooking.—They can purchase with economy, and cook well a plain dinner; some of these girls can do equally well a more elaborate dinner. They possess a fair knowledge of the value of food from an economic and health point of view. They can keep house accounts, lay a table tastefully, and wait at the latter nicely. The kitchens, sculleries, and pantries are models of neatness and cleanliness; scales, weights and measures are complete and accurate, and are neatly kept and always in their place.

In the kitchen are an ordinary range, an American range, and a gas cooking stove, and with the working of each the girls are equally familiar. A small metre is placed over the gas stove by which they are able to read the number of cubic feet of gas consumed, and calculate what it costs for cooking a dinner.

In each of these schools my suggestions for giving children a thorough practical knowledge of housekeeping and cookery are well carried out. The children can cook well, keep accounts, and show wonderful judgment and economy in the way they purchase the necessaries and keep within the sum allotted to them for their support.

They all assist in the cooking of the general school dinner, and no more pleasing and satisfactory sight could be enjoyed than is presented at the time of preparation for meals by these children hurrying about, neatly dressed in cap and apron, and with an air of order and work that would do credit to the menage of a kitchen in a first-class hotel.

LAUNDRYWORK.—They know the properties of water and the uses of the various materials used in washing, and can turn out household and fine things in a most creditable way.

HOUSEWORK.—They possess a fair knowledge of the principles and methods of ventilation, and they have a good practical knowledge of the duties of a housemaid. They can polish well ordinary leather, tan, and patent leather boots, clean silver, steels, and brass, and do most of the duties of an indoor servant in a creditable manner.

In one or other of these schools such work as milking cows, butter-making, bee-keeping, poultry rearing, and cottage gardening are taught. In Wexford the poultry industry has been so successful that the County Council asked for permission to allow their Instructress to give a course of lectures there, where the people attending could see what children under 16 years of age were capable of doing. In these schools there is a general shop where the girls are taught how to buy and sell and keep accounts. There is a telegraph office and savings bank—where they go through the form of sending messages and making deposits of savings. In one of them the girls keep books at the regular Savings Bank in the neighbourhood.

The schools in the second class are, in many respects, quite as good as those in the first, but lack the completeness which characterises these good all-round schools.

The remaining schools depart from this high class standard in varying degrees, some of them presenting many objectionable features in their general management.

FIRST CLASS.

1. Hampton House Industrial School for Protestant Girls, near Belfast. Acting Manager, Miss Thorpe.
2. St. Michael's Industrial School for Roman Catholic Girls, Wexford. Acting Manager, Mrs. M. A. Maguire.
3. Shamrock Lodge Industrial School for Protestant Girls, Belfast. Acting Manager, Miss Acheson.

SECOND CLASS.

1. Tipperary Industrial School for Roman Catholic Girls. Acting Manager, Mrs. Mary Frances Cantwell.
2. Summer Hill Industrial School for Roman Catholic Girls, Athlone. Acting Manager, Mrs. E. Jones.
3. St. Vincent's Industrial School for Roman Catholic Girls, Limerick. Acting Manager, Mrs. Mary A. Kenny.
4. St. Columba Industrial School for Roman Catholic Girls, Westport. Acting Manager, Mrs. M. P. Cullen.
5. Benada Abbey Industrial School for Roman Catholic Girls, Tubbercurry. Acting Manager, Mrs. Alice Walsh.
6. St. Francis Xavier's Industrial School for Roman Catholic Girls, Ballaghaderreen. Acting Manager, Mrs. Mary P. Kelly.

Boys' schools. I regret I cannot place any of the Boys' Schools in the first class. While there is much to admire in the well-managed schools, I still find deficiencies in many things that I consider essential for the proper training and education of the boys.

There is a most laudable effort on the part of many Managers to bring their schools up to the first class standard, and in a little time I expect they will succeed in doing so. In my next Report I hope to be able to make due recognition of these.

If Managers would only comply with the not unreasonable requirements set forth in my circular, addressed to them in February, 1900, in a short time they would bring their schools up to a high standard with credit to themselves and with great benefit to every child in their schools.

I have so often drawn attention to the objectionable features in school management in a general way that I think the time has now come to give each school its proper place in the order of merit. I hope in future reports to be able to state the features in the management that renders each deserving of praise or censure. At the present time I rest satisfied with classifying them according to their order of merit.

The image shows a document page with a header section at the top, a large central area with multiple columns and rows, and a footer section at the bottom. The text is mostly illegible due to the quality of the scan, but the layout suggests a structured form or ledger. The header section contains several lines of text, possibly identifying the document or the data it contains. The central area is divided into columns, with some text visible in the first column on the left, which appears to be a list of items or categories. The right side of the central area contains numerical data or dates. The footer section at the bottom contains a few lines of text, possibly a summary or a signature line. The overall appearance is that of a scanned document with significant noise and degradation.
